

Eric Villyency

In addition to his role as president and CEO of contemporary furniture brand Maurice Villyency Inc., this entrepreneur also supports budding fashion designers through the Villyency Emerging Fashion Fund. His own clothing label, Restoration of the Monarchy, is a line of T-shirts and jeans with unique details such as buttons inspired by the Maltese cross that adorned the crown of King Charles II of England.

ON HIS LIST:

- "Tickets to take my son to the Central Park Zoo for the first time."
- "Two scoops of gelato... in Capri!"
- A great piece of Midcentury Modern furniture to refinish
- A Nan Goldin photograph
- "A 70th birthday present for my father. It's a surprise!"

Central Park Zoo

Jenny Galluzzo

As a freelance television and print journalist, Galluzzo had no formal design training when she decided to launch Mayer, a line of dresses inspired by vintage caftans. After serving an internship with Peter Som, Galluzzo used trunk shows to launch Mayer as a bridge line of five crinkle-chiffon dresses, along with belts made of leather, silk, and chain.

Tomas Maier swimsuit

ON HER LIST:

- A new Tomas Maier swimsuit. "I only wear one-piece suits, and he makes the most flattering and stylish available."
- Sunglasses from Fabien Baron's new collection
- Cherry tomatoes from the Hardscrabble Farm Stand in East Hampton. "I'm a cherry-tomato addict and have tasted them all—I promise, these are the very best!"
- Sailing lessons. "I grew up sailing with my father, and every summer I say I want to learn how—but this year I'm really going to do it!"
- Travel-size Scrabble and backgammon sets to play under an umbrella at the beach

Tomatoes

Top to Bottom

These store managers prove that jewels and jeans make a dazzling combination.

- Necklace with handcrafted chain made of gold lacework and diamonds
- Diamond and platinum drop earrings
- Hoop earrings with platinum and diamond cluster

Julianne & Mark

J.J. Marco
1070 Madison Avenue,
212-744-3202.

Jason Fields

Adriano Goldschmied
111 Greene Street,
212-680-0581

- Still jeans
- Teddyboy jeans
- Kiss jeans in the new "five-year vintage" line